Urgent Action

Drug shortages put the lives of cancer patients at risk.

Inadequacies in regulating average selling prices (ASP) for regimens crucial to patient care are directly affecting manufacturers' ability to maintain operations and productivity for critical generic drugs. The result has led to several widespread, national drug shortages.

HOW THIS IMPACTS PATIENTS

Currently, there are no regulatory policies in place to sustain and subsidize pricing for generic regimens, evidenced by the diminishing supply in critical cancer drugs. If we don't take action today, patients will be at continued risk of not having access to these vital life-saving drugs.

WE URGE YOU TO CONTACT YOUR LOCAL AND STATE LEGISLATORS

URGENT ACTION REQUESTED

THE TIME FOR CHANGE IS NOW, AND IT'S TIME YOUR VOICE IS HEARD.

Florida Cancer Specialists & Research Institute, LLC (FCS) is asking all members of the oncology community – physicians, patients, caregivers to speak up for patients whose lives are at risk. Reach out to your local and state legislators and ask them to reform pricing regulation for generic drugs, an issue that has deeply affected the oncology community for years but has worsened in recent months.

We urge you to contact your local Florida legislators this week and ask for support that puts PATIENTS first by regulating the average selling price (ASP) of generic drugs.

Sample messaging (in your own words), could include:

"Please consider the regulation of pricing for generic drugs that would enable sufficient and sustainable production of live-saving drugs for patients."
